

WELL CONNECTED

building relationships among design, public health, & urban planning

University of Colorado Denver | Anschutz Medical Campus

College of Architecture and Planning UNIVERSITY OF COLORADO DENVER

Colorado School of Public Health Center for Health, Work & Environment

On November 13, 2015, CU Denver | Anschutz will host a one-day symposium on the CU Denver campus that will revolutionize collaborations and knowledge-sharing on the impact of the built environment on health and well-being. Thought leaders from public health, architecture and planning, development, economics, and business will come together to share their insights and innovations in creating healthy spaces, places, programs and policies. One cannot succeed without another and the fields of architecture, planning, and public health are converging.

CU Denver | Anschutz is a leader in improving the health, well-being and quality of life for people in Colorado and globally. Working with our partners and affiliates, we identify, study and innovate strategies that holistically address the health of the people and places we serve.

Join us
to lead this charge,
learn from experts in each field,
and foster new relationships that help you and your organization succeed in creating a culture of health and wellness.

Who Should Attend:

leaders, practitioners, teachers and students in public health, architecture, planning, urban design, developers, business, non-profit organizations and people seeking to improve health and well-being.

Where:

Student Commons Building, 1201 Larimer Street, CU Denver campus

More Info To Follow...

SAVE THE DATE 11.13.15